MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT

This year, after evaluating our recent fundraising efforts, the Alliance decided to scale back and host smaller events to support our Foundation's grant programs. Boots and Bourbon was an evening where members, spouses, and friends gathered, participated in bourbon tasting and a cooking demonstration, and learned a little more about the Alliance Foundation. The focus was on social and fun! Proceeds will support our Foundation's grant programs.

The next of our FUNdraisers will be held in February at the Fowling Warehouse. Fowling is a game that combines football and bowling. KCMS and KCOA will be invited to join us as we have a little fun and at the same time raise money for a good cause. Fowlers and non-fowlers are welcome. Details are currently being worked out and will be announced soon! We look forward to organizing more experiences where we can all easily come together socially and support our grant programs.

Sincerely,

Susan Jebson KCMSA President

Dr. Nirali Bora Joins KCHD as Medical Director

The Kent County Health Department (KCHD) has announced that Dr. Nirali Bora will fill the role of the department's Medical Director vacated recently by Dr. Mark Hall. Bora received her education at Brown University and the University of Michigan. She has most recently worked as a family practice physician at Mercy Health.

> Adam London, Administrative Heath Officer at KCHD, said that the recruiting and selection process focused on finding an individual whose understanding of public health included a genuine care for others. "It is important that this person understands the social determinants of health and the stresses that challenge so many in our community," said London.

Dr. Bora says even before she was "sure about medicine" she had an interest in public health. "My interest was initially in environmental health and social justice," said Dr. Bora. "People who are in more vulnerable populations or have lower socio-economic means, are often living in environments that are not contributing to their health and it makes it harder for them to have equality in terms of health care."

Bora says while her initial goal was to do some sort of public health work the idea remained nebulous. Practicing medicine, she thought, was an opportunity to help people. Bora says she remembers thinking, "Well, I know I can help people as a doctor and then I can figure out the public health piece." She adds "Family medicine was an easy choice because prevention is what I care about."

After her residency and spending time working with residents of a Navajo reservation in New Mexico, the Forest Hills Central grad found her way back to Kent County.

Bora says when the Medical Director's position at KCHD opened up, "It just seemed quite perfect for my interests. I think I have always been wanting a way to combine my interests and was never quite sure how to practically make that happen."

Dr. Nirali Bora is not a stranger to many staff at KCHD. She has volunteered her time since 2013, helping with community health improvement initiatives and with other health collaboratives in the community. Bora has also been a champion for the health of refugees living in Kent County.

Bora, whose first day at KCHD was September 4, 2018, is looking forward to the learning process ahead, "I think we have such a great team here with so much knowledge and people interested in collaborating. I am looking forward to the experience."

Bora is also working to earn a graduate degree in Public Health at Johns Hopkins University. When she is not working, Dr. Nirali Bora says she enjoys spending time with her husband and two sons, enjoying the outdoors and travelling.

Shared Discovery Curriculum

In August 2016, Michigan State University College of Human Medicine launched its innovative new competency-based curriculum called the Shared Discovery Curriculum. It is unlike any other curriculum in the country integrating basic, social, and clinical science into all didactics while placing patients at the center of the learning experience.

> The first year of medical school is called the Early Clinical Experience (ECE). The content of each week is based on a Chief Complaint and Concern (i.e., dyspnea, abdominal pain). Within that week, the physiology, anatomy, histology, pathology, biochemistry and pharmacology pertaining to that chief complaint are taught.

> A typical week in the ECE includes one-half day in simulation, one-half day of team-based learning, two half-days of guided independent learning, a half day in the anatomy lab, and two small group sessions that are led by a consistent clinician and basic scientist.

> The students also participate in two half-days of clinical experience at one of more than 100 primary care clinics in Grand Rapids or Lansing metropolitan areas starting the third month of medical school.

> Before their clinical placement, the students perform 29 patient care checklists to 100 percent proficiency. Within the medical office, each student works alongside the clinical team throughout a patient visit to check vital signs, perform medication reconciliation, counsel patients on diet and more.

Feedback from the clinical practices shows that 92 percent found having a first-year medical student in the clinic was a positive experience and 88 percent stated that the student was useful in their clinic. Eighty-five percent of the students agree that their clinical experiences contribute to their learning of the biopsychosocial sciences.

The biggest improvement for our students has been in the area of "Meaningful Learning Experiences." Whether they are in clinic, simulation or their small group Learning Society session, they find the time spent to be valuable.

Resolution Writing

Michigan State University College of Human Medicine students met for a Resolution Writing Workshop with seasoned Resolution authors, Jayne Courts, MD of Kent County Medical Society and David Walsworth, MD of Ingham County Medical Society. Both physicians represent their county at the Michigan State Medical Society House of Delegates. Drs. Courts and Walsworth currently serve as Alternate Delegate and Delegate to the AMA, respectively. Students in Grand Rapids and Lansing learned what makes a resolution strong or weak and how to appropriately articulate statements to support the point of the resolution.

IRS Issues Proposed Regulations On Deduction for Owners of Pass-Through Businesses: The Good, Bad and Ugly for Health Care Providers

In August of this year, the Internal Revenue Service (IRS) issued proposed regulations that provide guidance to owners of pass-through businesses as to eligibility for a federal tax deduction of 20% of the income generated by the businesses. This deduction was part of the Tax Cuts and Jobs Act (TCJA). Although the stated purpose of the proposed regulations is to provide clarity on eligibility for and the means to compute the deduction, this guidance is lengthy and complex. However, for health care providers, there are two important takeaways.

Guidance on whether a health care business is a "specified service trade or business"

One of the important limitations to the passthrough deduction in the TCJA is that owners of pass-through businesses that conduct a specified service trade or business (SSTB) and whose income exceed the so-called income limitation ($207,500 for single taxpayers and $415,000 for married taxpayers who file jointly) are not entitled to claim the 20% deduction. The TCJA provides that a SSTB includes a trade or business that involves the performance of services in the health field. The proposed regulations provide guidance as to what types of businesses involve the performance of health services:

The performance of services in the field of health means the provision of medical services by physicians, pharmacists, nurses, dentists, veterinarians, physical therapists, psychologists, and other similar healthcare professionals who provide medical services directly to a patient (emphasis supplied). Prop Reg. 1.199A - 5(b)(2)(ii).

Providers of certain types of health care services might be able to avoid the SSTB limitation if their services are not provided directly to patients. For example, radiologists who are partners in a professional limited liability company and who merely read test results may be eligible for the deduction. The treating physician for such patients would not be entitled to the deduction since the treating physician provides services "directly to patients."

Similarly, if an orthopedic group also owns a physical therapy clinic, because that clinic's services are directly related to the medical field, it is likely that the clinic will be deemed to be engaged in a SSTB. On the flip side, if the same physician group also operates a health clinic "that provide[s] physical service or conditioning to their customers (i.e., not medical related)", the clinic will not be engaged in a SSTB.

TAKEAWAY NO. 2

The use of a "captive MSO" will not work

Prior to issuance of the proposed regulations, one of the planning suggestions that many advisors had recommended for consideration by owners of health care businesses whose income exceeded the income limitation was segregation of the billing, collection, accounting and other "back office" activities of the practice into a separate legal entity under common ownership with the practice group. This separate legal entity would in reality be a management service organization ("MSO") that provides services only to the affiliated practice group. Such a new entity was referred to by some as a "captive MSO."

Under the proposed regulations, if the captive MSO provides services only to the practice group under common control with the group, the MSO would be deemed to conduct a SSTB. This of course eliminates the tax advantage of establishment for the MSO. By contrast, if more than 20% of the income of the MSO is generated from providing management services to others, such as unrelated medical practice groups, the MSO would not be found to engage in a SSTB.

Similarly, if a dentist is the sole member of a limited liability company that owns a two-story office building and rents the first floor to the dentist's dental practice but leases the second floor to an unrelated business, half of the income generated by the LLC from the building will be deemed to be generated from a SSTB.

Although the proposed regulations limit the ability of health care providers to use affiliated entities to maximize the 20% deduction, planning opportunities still exist if the ancillary business is owned by a trust or other entity not under "common control" or if the business provides services to unrelated service providers.

In summary, even though they are complex and preclude some available planning opportunities, the recently issued proposed regulations do not eliminate all planning opportunities to maximize the 20% deduction for owners of pass-through businesses that provide health care services. Business owners would be well-advised to consult with qualified legal counsel and accounting representatives to develop a strategy based on their specific circumstances, which include the types of services they provide, the net income generated and the anticipated or current legal structure of each business.
